Commander's Report

To the National Color Guard members, my report for the half year starts in July 2015. My first act as Color Guard commander was at Point Pleasant WVA. I had great time with the Color Guard from the near by states. My host for the 3 days was Steve Hart from WVA. Steve is from my Home town in Maryland. My second trip was to South Carolina to Kings Mountain. My host there was Mark Anthony we had members from North Carolina and South Carolina and from Georgia and Florida we had a great time at Kings Mountain. Went home for needed rest over 2000 miles on that trip. That weekend was back in the car to VA and the Tomb of the Unknown. Went home to get with the MD Color Guard for a trip to Yorktown VA for Yorktown Day. Went back home for events in MD for Nov. and Dec. Back to VA for the Battle of Great Bridge VA. In January I was back to SC for the Battle of Cowpens - again had a good time in SC. In February was my big trip to date. Lou Raborg went with me to Laredo Texas for the George Washington Parade. My host was past Color Guardsmen of the year Thomas Green of Texas. We all had a long 2.5 mile walk in the heat of Texas. Back home to get ready for Spring Leadership in KY. I will miss Guilford Court house in NC. Hope to make it next year in 2017. At home four members of MDSSAR will be honored for the work they have done for the MDSAR. Hope to see a good turn out of the Color Guard at Boston in July 2016

David Wayne Hoover, National Color Guard Commander, Maryland Society

Vice Commander's Dispatch

The National SAR Color Guard continues its tradition of service and excellence in 2016. The year so far has seen large participation at established events such as the Battle of Cowpens in upstate South Carolina and new events such as the Battle of Cowan's Ford outside of Charlotte, NC.

In between and beyond there have been events such as the Battle of Kettle Creek (GA), the Crossing of the Dan (VA), the Battles of Moore's Creek Bridge and Guilford Courthouse (NC), the Last Naval Battle (FL) and the National Spring Leadership Meeting.

Obviously there have been many other local chapter and state society events as well.

In each of these, you represent the National SAR and honor your patriot ancestor(s) by serving as a focal point of the attending public's attention.

Let me encourage each of you to plan to attend as many events as you can this year and in attending these events, be prepared to explain the SAR and the significance of the event you are attending. An updated listing of official Color Guard events is published in this issue.

Please note that new events have been added such as the Action at Machias in Maine and Buford's Massacre in South Carolina. Also you will note that Patriots Day (April 17th), Memorial Day, July 4th and Veterans Day have all been added. On these dates, any activity on the local level is considered a National Color Guard Event regardless of its location. (Just remember that you can only count one event each day toward the various Color Guard medals even if you participate in more than one event.)

Let me also extend an invitation to each member of the color guard to attend the Annual Congress in Boston if you can. This Congress will give the Color Guard the rare opportunity to march along the streets of Boston with the Fife & Drum Corp. of the US Army Old Guard.

Remember, you are the reason the National SAR Color Guard is the success it is.

Mark C Anthony, Vice Commander

Colorguardsman of the Year

The Gold Color Guard Medal was authorized in 1998. It may only be worn by the National Color Guard Commander (usually presented at the end of his term as commander) and those guardsmen selected as Color Guardsman of the Year.

The Color Guardsman of the Year is elected by the Guardsmen present at the Spring Leadership Meeting.

The following is a listing of those guardsmen who have been honored by their compatriots as Color Guardsman of the Year.

From the Editor

Welcome compatriots.

I'd like to take this time to remind all state Color Guard Commanders to collect and compile the color activities of their state color guard units and their state's chapter color guard units. I prefer that submissions come from the state color guard commander rather than the chapters because the color guard commander should be aware of what the chapter units are accomplishing. I receive submissions from chapters that are recaps of chapter activities - most having nothing to do with their color guards. While that input is interesting it is better placed in The SAR Magazine.

As you will note by the listing of state color guard commanders (page 39) in this issue, there are 36 states with a named commander. I am hoping that eventually there will be 36 chapter submissions to the "Reports from the Field" section. The January 2016 issue had 18 states reporting, this April issue has 11.

Of the 11 National Color Guard events (see page 38) in January through March, 5 had a state reporting on the events. During the April to June months there are 17 events taking place. I look forward to getting photos and/or a write up on each of those events. Our color guard activities need exposure and publicity - and this publication is one way of providing that exposure. So, at least if there is an event in your state, have someone be responsible to take a photo or to write up the event and send it to you, the state color guard commander.

The preferred method of submissions is by e-mail with attachments but I will accept USPS submissions, too.

Thank you for your help. Please forward this issue to your state's chapter color guard commanders for dissemination amongst their color guard members.

The Battle of Machias

The Battle of Machias (also known as the Battle of the Margarett) was the second naval engagement of the American Revolutionary War, the Battle off Fairhaven being the first. It took place on June 11–12, 1775, in and around the port of Machias in what is now eastern Maine, and resulted in the capture by Patriot militia of a British schooner.

Following the outbreak of the war and the start of the Siege of Boston, British authorities enlisted the assistance of Loyalist merchant Ichabod Jones to assist in the acquisition of needed supplies. Two of Jones' merchant ships arrived in Machias on June 2, accompanied by the British armed sloop Margarett, commanded by midshipman James Moore. The townspeople, unhappy with Jones' business practices, decided to arrest him, and in the attempt, decided to go after Moore and his ship. Moore was able to escape out of the harbor, but the townspeople seized one of Jones' ships, armed it and a second local ship, and sailed out to meet him. In a short confrontation, they captured Moore's vessel and crew, fatally wounding him in the process.

The people of Machias went on to capture additional British ships, and fought off the landing of a large force intended to take control of the town in 1777. Privateers and others operating out of Machias continued to be a thorn in the British Navy's side throughout the war.

Background

On April 19, 1775, the American Revolutionary War began with the Battles of Lexington and Concord in the British Province of Massachusetts Bay. Following the battle, the militia that had mustered to oppose the British besieged the city of Boston where the British troops were located.

Boston's British military leaders, Admiral Samuel Graves and General Thomas Gage, both had reason to do business with the people of Machias, a small coastal logging community located in what is now eastern Maine, but was then part of the Province of Massachusetts Bay. Gage required lumber to build barracks for additional troops arriving in the besieged city.[7] Graves wanted to recover the guns from the wreck of HMS Halifax, which had apparently been intentionally run aground in Machias Bay by a local pilot in February 1775. The ship's guns were reported to be of interest to the Patriots of Machias. Graves authorized Ichabod Jones, a Tory Machias merchant who had ships in the port of Boston, to take flour and other food supplies to the town of Machias aboard his two ships Unity and Polly in exchange for Gage's needed lumber. To guarantee that this would happen, Graves sent the armed schooner Margarett (sometimes also spelled Margueritta or Marguerite in historical accounts), under the command of James Moore, a midshipman from his flagship HMS Preston, to accompany the two merchant vessels. Moore also carried orders to retrieve what he could from the wreck of the Halifax, which they would pass on the way.

Arrival at Machias

On June 2, 1775, Jones' ships arrived in the port at Machias, while the Margarett was delayed retrieving the guns from the Halifax wreck. Jones met resistance from the community by refusing to sell his pork and flour unless he was allowed to also load lumber for Boston. In a meeting on June 6, the townspeople voted against doing business with Jones. The hostile climate led Jones to ask Moore to bring the Margarett within firing distance of the town. This prompted the town to meet a second time; this time they voted to permit the trade, and the Unity was docked at the wharf to begin unloading.

Following the vote, Jones announced that he would only do business with those who had voted in favor of trade. This angered those who had voted against, and Colonel Benjamin Foster, a local militia leader, conspired with militia from neighboring towns to capture Jones following the example of Brunswick militiamen a month earlier. Their plan to seize him at church on June 11 failed when he noticed the group of men approaching the building. Jones ran into the woods, from which he eventually emerged two days later. Moore and his second-in-command, who were also attending the services, also managed to get back to their ship.

Prelude

Some of the militia men boarded the docked Unity, removed the remaining supplies, and also removed her sails. Others went around by land near the place where the Margarett was anchored, and demanded her surrender. Moore refused, threatening to fire on the town. This threat was more bluster than real, as Margarett sported only a few mounted guns capable of firing one-pound shot. More of the militia men rowed out to the Polly, which was anchored downstream from the

Captain Jeremiah O'Brien

(1744–1818) was a captain in the Massachusetts State Navy. Prior to its existence (or that of the Continental Navy), he commanded the sloop Unity when she captured the British armed schooner HMS Margarett in the Battle of Machias, the first naval battle of the American Revolutionary War.

This battle is often considered the first time British colors were struck to those of the United States, even though the Continental Navy did not exist at the time. The United States Merchant Marine claims Unity as its member and this incident as their beginning.

O'Brien continued as the captain of Unity, renamed Machias Liberty, for two years, and received the first captain's commission in the Massachusetts State Navy in 1775.

The 2016 Spring Leadership meeting of the Color Guard Committee was brought to order by Chairman and Color Guard Commander David Hoover at 2 p.m. He welcomed everyone and introduced his staff. Fifty-one color guardsmen representing 20 state societies attended the meeting.

Chairman Hoover introduced the past commanders in attendance: J. Michael Tomme, CDR Charles R. Lampman and Col. Peter K. Goebel.

Although a directive advised color guardsmen uniforms would not be required at the 2016 Spring Leadership the meeting was deemed a national color guard event. There were four candidates for NSSAR Color Guardsman of the Year; Karl W. Jacobs (California Society), Ken Lucky (North Carolina Society), Daniel Woodruff (South Carolina Society) and Paul Wilke, Ohio Society). The committee selected compatriot Karl W. Jacobs as NSSAR Color Guardsman of the Year for 2016.

The committee awarded a National Society Von Steuben Medal for Sustained Achievement in the NSSAR Color Guard to California Society compatriot Jim Faulkinbury, and California Society President and Color Guard Committee member Dr. Kent Gregory accepted the medal on behalf of compatriot Faulkinbury.

Karl Jacobs named Color Guardsman of the Year 2016 David Hoover and Mike Tomme

The Kilt Subcommittee Chairman Tom Owen gave their report regarding the appropriateness of SAR color guardsmen wearing kilts at SAR Color Guard events – chairman Owen reported substantial evidence was uncovered that Georgia militiamen wore kilts during the American Revolutionary War. A motion was made to permit SAR color guardsmen to wear kilts at SAR Color Guard events, which was approved by the committee after discussion.

There was a motion by compatriot Jim Taylor that the choice for awarding points for participation in color guard events (point system or event system) should be left to the individual compatriot to decide. Color Guard Adjutant Fosdyk gave a rebuttal, arguing it would put an unnecessary burden on the state society col-in the Color Guard for Jim Faulkinbury or guard commanders to compile points from both systems, and the motion failed.

Dr. Kent Gregory accepts a NSSAR Von Steuben Medal for Sustained Achievement

There was a motion by compatriot Douglas Wood, VPG New England, that the Action at Machias, Maine, be named a SAR National Color Guard event, and the motion passed.

Past Color Guard Commander Mike Tomme reminded the committee the Vigil at the Tomb of George and Martha Washington would be held at Mount Vernon on Saturday, September 17, 2016.

Compatriot Paul Callanan spoke briefly about the involvement of the color guard at the 126th Congress Memorial Service in Boston. He reminded the committee members that weapons (including muskets and swords) will not be allowed in the church. He also mentioned the US Army 3rd Infantry Regiment "Old Guard" Fife and Drum Corps may march with the color guard from the hotel to the church.

SAR Colorguardsman Editor Steven Williams reminded members of the committee to submit articles and photographs to him for upcoming issues of the magazine.

I'm looking forward to seeing many of you at the 126th Congress in Boston.

Reverend Daniel Waldo - Old Survivor of the Revolution

101 Years Old. Born in Windham, Connecticut on September 10, 1762. Died July 30, 1864. Drafted into the Continental Army in 1778. Taken prisoner by the Tories a year later in Horseneck, Connecticut.

His connection with the Revolution began when he was 16 years old. The 16-year-old Waldo fought for freedom from British rule during the Revolution. He joined a company of Connecticut patriots that formed in his hometown of Windham. Captured by Tories while guarding the headquarters of his commander on Christmas Day 1779, he survived two months as a prisoner.

Waldo found religion after the war ended. He attended Yale and became a minister after graduation. Ordained under the auspices of the Congregational church in 1792, he embarked on a lifetime journey to serve flocks of the faithful across New England and the Northeast.

He was brought to New York where he was confined in the Sugar house in New York together with 20 or more members of his company. Sugar House Prisons were sugar refineries, sturdy stone and brick buildings. They were used by the British as prisons where captured American soldiers and civilians were confined. Two months later he and his whole company were exchanged for British prisoners and released. Rev. Waldo said he never saw Washington or La Fayette. A minister in the Congregational Church, he served for a short time as chaplain at New London. In his later years, at the age of 96, he was chosen chaplain of the House of Representatives.

"In his personal habits Mr. Waldo was very careful and regular. His standing advice was to 'eat little.' He drank tea and coffee. The control of the temper he deemed one of the most important conditions of health, declaring that a fit of passion does more to break down the constitution than a fever. His memory was excellent, differing from that of most aged people, in that he retained current events with the same clearness as the earlier incidents of his history."

In 1856, at the age of 94, Waldo was named Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

It is recorded that he was in good health during his service to the House; he was also one of seven Revolutionary War veterans who, having survived into the age of photography, were featured in the 1864 book The Last Men of the Revolution (which gives many more details of his life). Waldo died in Syracuse, New York at the advanced age of 101, of injuries sustained after falling down a flight of stairs, and he was given a memorial in the House itself.

MASSACHUSETTS

Colonial Henry Knox Color Guard

With the onset of war in 1775, America began to train an army to defend against a British invasion. Color Guards and Fifers and Drummers were an important part of the 18th-century military. Just as America enlisted soldiers and stockpiled arms and ammunition, it also trained marchers and drummers to work with soldiers in the field. In the 18th century, these groups served as signal instruments for the infantry, relaying the commander's orders to soldiers in camp and on the field of battle. The steady rhythm and spirited tunes of the fifers and drummers kept the soldier's mind off the tedious march.

The uniforms of the Color Guard reflect the time when the Massachusetts regiment was formed on May 19, 1775 with ten companies and 417 men under the command of Colonel Richard Gridley. On November 17, 1775, Colonel Henry Knox took command and held it until December 27, 1776, when he was made Brigadier General and Chief of Artillery in the Continental Army. When the Army was reorganized in 1776, this regiment became the 3rd Continental Artillery under Colonel John Crane.

During the period 1775-1776, the soldiers wore no uniform except what they could get, but the officers adopted a blue coat faced with red and lined with white cloth. These coats were cut in any style that the individual chose as there was no regulation, but the buttons were to be gilt and the buttonholes and lace the same. The coats were cut with tight sleeves and full skirts, as a rule, following the fashion of the day.

Later they wore the regulation artillery uniform adopted for all the artillery in accordance with Washington's general order of October, 1779. This order was about the same as given above except that the coats were to be faced and lined with red, and the buttonholes bound with yellow tape for the men, and gilt for the officers. Buttons for the men were of pewter with raised letters "U. S. A." on them, at this time.

The Massachusetts Society's Color Guard carries forward these traditions. Since its inception, audiences throughout New England have enjoyed the performances and experienced some history of America's Revolution. The Color Guard appears in more than 20 events each year as part of our national program. It has come to symbolize what is best about our community, our history, and our society

George Washington Birthday Lunch, Feb 20, 2016, at Tamarack Junction, Reno. Organized by President David Hess, this event was well attended to celebrate the day. Chapter member Dr. Gary Ridenour was awarded the SAR Bronze Good Citizenship Medal, for his worldwide research and study, and educational efforts in public awareness, regarding the Zika virus. Dr. Ridenour is an authoritative voice on the virus, and well known spokesman on international Coast to Coast Radio.

Declaration of Independence presentation at Dayton Intermediate School, Feb 23, 2016. This event was organized by Chapter President David Hess for the combined group of Northern Nevada Chapter's Fifes & Drums and Color Guard members at the Dayton Intermediate School, in Dayton Nevada. The Color Guard made its appearance with about 180 students during their study of American history and the Declaration of Independence. Before the event, the students' classes were divided into six distinct regiments, with each having a Color Guard member assigned to it.

During the event, each class (regiment) was addressed by its Color Guardsman, to read in turn, his portion of the Declaration of Independence. Each "regiment" cheered at their introduction to the assembly, after the reading, questions from students were fielded by the Color Guard. President David Hess gave a rousing speech, exhorting freedom to the regiments, and heartening the entire audience. Two members of the Fifes & Drums of Nevada played while the students filed in to the gym for the event.

Compatriot Joe E. Harris Jr. was the guest Speaker at the Signers Chapter annual George Washington Birthday Dinner held on Feb 20th. Joe gave a very interesting talk on George Washington during the Winter Encampment of 1777/1778 at Valley Forge. At the conclusion of his speech he donated a beautifully framed picture of George Washington kneeling in prayer at Valley Forge. This picture will be auctioned or raffled at the Nevada Societies 2017 annual meeting with the proceeds made available for the Signers Chapter Color Guard. Thank You Joe - Gary Parriott Nevada Society Color Guard Commander. (Joe has served as the President of the North Carolina Society (2005), elected the National Society's Executive Director (2007) and served as the VPG of the Inter mountain District (2012 and 2014). Joe was awarded The Minuteman Award (Class of 2015), the highest award presented to a member. This award is presented for distinguished service rendered to the Sons of the American Revolution.)

The Northern Nevada Chapter raffled a bottle of Whiskey from the Mount Vernon historic Distillery. Each year the distillery produces a small batch of distilled spirits for purchase by the public but quantities are very limited. So this was truly a unique opportunity and a great way to support the Color Guard. (George Washington was once the largest whiskey producer in America. Today Mount Vernon continues the tradition of producing whiskey as well as other small batches of distilled spirits at the historic Distillery & Gristmill site.)

played a strong role in the taking of the first ship of the Revolutionary war.

Colonel Benjamin Foster born June 26th, 1726 baptized in 1728, Greenland, NH. He Died July 4th, 1818 in Machias, ME. Served in the war with Canada under General Abercrombie. (Lewisburg surrender 1745) He was granted Colonel on his 19th birthday. One of the leaders in the capture of British armed cutter Margaretta in the Machias Bay on June 12, 1775.

Liberty poles

were often erected in town squares in the years before and during the American Revolution. Some colonists erected liberty poles on their own private land (such as in Woburn, Massachusetts—the pole raising there is reenacted annually). An often violent struggle over liberty poles erected by the Sons of Liberty in New York City raged for 10 years. The poles were periodically destroyed by the royal authorities, only to be replaced by the Sons with new ones. The conflict lasted from the repeal of the Stamp Act in 1766 until the revolutionary New York Provincial Congress came to power in 1775. The liberty pole in New York City had been crowned with a gilt vane bearing the single word, “Liberty”.

When an ensign was raised (usually red) on a liberty pole, it would be a calling for the Sons of Liberty or townspeople to meet and vent or express their views regarding British rule.[citation needed][original research?] The pole was known to be a symbol of dissent against Great Britain. The symbol is also apparent in many seals and coats of arms as a sign of liberty, freedom, and independence.

Margaretta, and attempted to tow her into the harbor. This attempt failed when she ran aground, possibly due to low tide. Moore raised anchor and came alongside Polly, intending to recover her. After a brief and inconsequential exchange of gunfire with the militia men on the shore, however, he again raised anchor and went further downstream to a safe anchorage.

The next day, the men of Machias regrouped. Foster took about 20 men to East Machias, where they commandeered the Falmouth Packet, a local schooner. The remaining men commandeered the Unity. They rigged her, installed some planks as a makeshift breastwork to serve as protection, armed themselves with muskets, pitchforks and axes and then set out after the Margaretta, which by that time had reached the waters of Machias Bay. Moore had brought aboard as pilot one Captain Toby, near whose sloop he had anchored overnight, and was looking to depart the scene. In jibing into brisk winds, however, the Margaretta's main boom and gaff broke away, crippling its navigability. As a result, once in Holmes Bay, Moore captured a sloop, took its spar and gaff to replace the Margaretta's and also took captive its pilot, Robert Avery, of Norwich, Connecticut.

Conflict

The Unity crew, about 30 Machias men, elected Jeremiah O'Brien as their captain, and then sailed out to chase down the Margaretta. As the Unity was a much faster sailing vessel, O'Brien's crew quickly overtook the crippled Margaretta, while the Falmouth Packet lagged behind. Maine historian Roger Duncan, among others, indicates that both the Unity and the Falmouth Packet engaged the Margaretta, but other sources disagree. Early 20th-century Machias historian George Drisko claims that the Falmouth Packet either ran aground or never caught up to the Margaretta, and that the men aboard the Unity alone battled the Margaretta directly.

Seeing the Unity approaching, Moore opened full sail and cut away his boats in an attempt to escape. As the Unity pulled closer, he opened fire, but the Machias crew managed to avoid that fire and pull alongside the Margaretta. It took two tries, but they tied alongside and stormed on board the Margaretta, led by O'Brien's brother John and Joseph Getchell. Both sides also exchanged musket shots, and Moore tossed hand grenades onto the Unity until Samuel Watts took him down with a musket shot to the chest. As Duncan reports, the Falmouth Packet then managed to pull along the other side of the Margaretta, and the combined crews overwhelmed the Margaretta.

As Midshipman Moore was grievously wounded, his second, Midshipman Stillingfleet, surrendered the crew and vessel. Moore was taken into care in Machias at the home of Stephen Jones, the nephew of Ichabod Jones, but died the next day. At least three other members of Moore's crew were also killed, as was Robert Avery, the colonist taken by the British. The remaining crew members of the British schooner were held at Machias for about a month, and were eventually handed over to the Massachusetts Provincial Congress. There were also reports circulated, likely exaggerated, that as many as 100 British men died in this and other skirmishes in the Machias area. Machias lost two men, John McNiell and James Coolbroth. Coolbroth died after the skirmish of his wounds. Three others were badly wounded but survived. They were John Berry, who had a musket ball enter his mouth and exit behind his ear, Isaac Taft, and James Cole.

Liberty pole story

There is a widely told story concerning this affair that Machias men erected a Liberty pole after meeting in the Burnham Tavern to discuss the battles of Lexington and Concord. This story, which persists in modern history books and travel guides, has been shown to be an 1831 fabrication by Machias resident John O'Brien. There is no mention of the Liberty pole in any earlier accounts, including the official report sent by the residents of Machias in 1775, and the letters of other participants in the events

Painter spoke about the creation of the SAR to remember and honor Revolutionary War patriots, how SAR members have served in every American conflict since the organization’s beginning and how important it is to remember and honor those who pay the price for our freedom. US Congressman Jim Bridenstine spoke of the importance of remembering our veterans during the Christmas holiday. Many servicemen and women do not get to have the holiday with their families and for many families who have lost a loved one in service, Christmas is a very difficult time.

Participants enjoy dressing in Colonial-period clothing and meeting historical character interpreters. The learning experience is enriched by bringing together these educational elements in a beautiful colonial setting at Kirk of the Hills Presbyterian Church. Members of the community assisted in pinning the veterans, making the moment a true "welcome home." This was a heartwarming and uplifting event. We received many, many compliments and thanks from the veterans for our act of appreciation and gratitude.

Many patriotic and service organizations were represented among the 90 attendees. Janet O'Connor Camarata presented "Scots-Irish Settlers in the Wilderness. It was a great chance for the SAR to come together with our Washington DAR sisters.

Zachary Thorley planned and supervised, for his Eagle Scout project, the construction of three, large flag retirement boxes which were placed in prominent locations with the approval of the City Mayor, City Fire Chief, and the VFW post commander. His meetings with these prominent leaders garnered TV and press publicity to announce his Troop's flag retirement services to the public. His efforts enabled the collection of some 330 worn and faded National flags, for which he organized and led a proper flag retirement ceremony. Zachary Thorley's extraordinary project succeeded in raising awareness and respect for the proper treatment of our National Colors throughout his community. His engagement of civic leaders, businesses, veterans, boy scouts, and ordinary citizens exhibits the best of good citizenship in his community. The Sons of the American Revolution deems him most worthy to receive the SAR Bronze Good Citizenship Medal.

"Outstanding Sea Scout receives the SAR Good Citizenship Award."

(Eagle Scouts and JROTC cadet teenagers receive regular recognition from SAR but the Sea Scouts are often overlooked, even though their highest rank of Quartermaster is equivalent to Eagle Scout and they are every bit as qualified as JROTC cadets..)

These pictures show our local Sea Explorer Program in action. Tacoma's unit may be the best Sea Scout Ship in the Nation. They are learning seamanship, under adult scouters and US Coast Guard scrutiny, in the areas of piloting, navigation, engineering and deck seamanship, along with BSA values. Our Chapter regularly recognizes their outstanding young leaders by award of the SAR Good Citizenship Medal and Outstanding Citizenship pin & certificate. The Sea Scout rank of "Quartermaster" is equivalent to BSA Eagle Scout. Only 0.5% of Sea Scouts achieve this rank. Two sea scouts from SES Ship 110 were presented their Quartermaster award last night here in Tacoma.

Quartermaster Emilee Hansen has met all the qualifications to pilot under Coast Guard authority (and adult supervision) a twin engine motor vessel. She learned all this in several years aboard the "S.E.S. Charles N. Curtis" a 80 foot, 60 ton former Coast Guard cutter that saw duty chasing rum-runners off the East Coast and did patrol duty with the US Navy in the Columbia River during WWII. This talented, experienced Sea Scout is well deserving of the SAR Good Citizenship Medal.

His Regiment marched to Suffolk, and his company of 15 men under Captain Davenport was sent to the Eastern Shore of Maryland to acquire some negroes from a British ship in the Chesapeake Bay. From Norfolk Sargent Thomas Pope led the company to the British ship and returned to Suffolk. He spent three months with the army at Suffolk, Mead Mills, Portsmouth and the Brick Church. Two weeks before he was discharged he was drafted himself, and his father procured Charles Rose to serve in his place for two weeks till he was able to take his own place. Captain Jesse Whithead signed his discharge papers.

On 15th April 1781 he served for six months and three weeks under Captain John Taylor, in a Regiment commanded by Major MacLomon (sic. Christian Charles de Klaumann), Colonel Thomas Meriwether, and General Peyer Muhlenberg. He marched from Surrey old Courthouse then to Mead Mills, to Suffolk, to Petersburg. There he was engaged in the Battle of Blandford Hill 25 April 1781. He thence marched to Richmond to the old Piney-Field, then to Williamsburg. There under Captain Myrick he crossed the James River and marched then to Cobham, to Hog Island on the Chesapeake Bay, to Yorktown. He was discharged by Captain John Taylor, at Yorktown on 18 October 1781, but his discharge papers have not been found. He was at Yorktown when General Cornwallis surrendered to General Greene on 19 October 1781.

James Jr. is mentioned in his fathers will, dated 29 February 1791, who died on 6 June 1792 in Southampton County, Virginia. James Jr. was Baptized in 1792, Confirmed in 1798 in Guilford County, Virginia, and took his First Communion in 1812 in Stokes County, North Carolina. He had moved to Wake (1785-1791), Guilford (1792-1798) and Stokes (1799-1812) Counties, North Carolina. In Wake County he first married Prudence (Freeman) Dunn Barham (3 March 1754-1815) on 20 October 1785, widow of John Edmond Dunn (probate 4 May 1784, executor John Forde of Sussex Co. Virginia) and the daughter of Josiah and Phoebe (Stokes) Freeman. She had six children by her first marriage. They all grew up to love their stepfather.

They moved to Logan County, Kentucky (1813-1827). As early as 1812 following the New Madrid Earthquakes (1811-1812) they were one of the early pioneers of Logan County, (now Trigg County) in the Rockcastle Precincts, at the head of Dyer's Creek a tributary of the Cumberland River above the old Trigg Furnace. His first wife Prudence died in January 1, 1815.

On September 11, 1815 James married Elizabeth Houston (1780 or 1794-1821). They lived in Logan, Calloway, and Trigg Counties (1833-1841), Kentucky even though they may not of moved as counties were formed out of one another. He applied for a Revolution War Pension on June 24, 1833, at the age of 69 in Trigg County. In 1841 he was still receiving his pension in Trigg County. Sometime between 1841 and 1846 he may have resided with kith or kin in Tennessee.

Early in 1846 he moved to Greene County Missouri to be near his daughter Phoebe Barham Tatum who moved to the area in 1837 and helped established the mount Pleasant Baptist Church, and his son James F. Barham who lived near Brookline (Springfield), Missouri. He Transferred the pension form Kentucky to Greene County, on December 28, 1846. On April 10, 1855 he applied for bounty land in Greene County, Missouri when he was 92. In 1860 he was celebrated in Springfield as the only living Revolutionary Veteran in the western USA. He was cited by President Abraham Lincoln as one of the last five Revolutionary Soldiers on the U. S. Pension Rolls, and on February 27, 1865 Congress awarded him $300.00 annually in addition to his pension, but he had already died.

Buford's massacre - Battle of Waxhaws

The Battle of Waxhaws (also known as the Waxhaws or Waxhaw massacre, and Buford's massacre) took place during the American Revolutionary War on May 29, 1780, near Lancaster, South Carolina, between a Continental Army force led by Abraham Buford and a mainly Loyalist force led by British officer Banastre Tarleton. Buford refused an initial demand to surrender, but when his men were attacked by Tarleton's cavalry, many threw down their arms to surrender. Buford apparently attempted to surrender, however, the British commanding officer Tarleton was shot at during the truce, having his horse fall and trap him. Loyalists and British troops were outraged at the breaking of the truce in this manner and proceeded to fall on the rebels.

While Tarleton was trapped under his dead horse, men continued killing the Continental soldiers, including men who were not resisting. Little quarter was given to the patriots/rebels. Of the 400 or so Continentals, 113 were killed with sabers, 150 so badly injured they could not be moved and 53 prisoners were taken by the British and Loyalists. "Tarleton's quarter", thereafter became a common expression for refusing to take prisoners. In some subsequent battles in the Carolinas, few of the defeated were taken alive by either side. This 'Battle of Waxhaws' became the subject of an intensive propaganda campaign by the Continental Army to bolster recruitment and incite resentment against the British. Equally valid accounts of the battle by soldiers from both sides describe Tarleton as having no part in ordering a massacre as he had been trapped under his horse, and when freed immediately ordered thorough medical treatment of American prisoners and wounded.

After the battle, the wounded were treated at nearby churches by the congregants, one of whom was a young Andrew Jackson. Tarleton claimed that after the battle ended, the wounded of both sides were treated "with equal humanity" and that the British provided "every possible convenience". Due to the large number of wounded, people from all over the countryside came to assist in their care. When they learned of what had happened, albeit one-sidedly, news of the apparent "violation" of "quarter" on Tarleton's part spread rapidly through the region.

The battle, at least temporarily, consolidated British control over South Carolina, and Patriot sentiment was at a low ebb. General Clinton, among other acts before he left Charleston for New York, revoked the parole of surrendered Patriots. This affront (violating accepted "rules of war"), and reports of this battle, may have changed the direction of the war in the South. Many who might have stayed neutral flocked to the Patriots, and "Tarleton's Quarter!" and "Remember Buford" became rallying cries for the Whigs.

News of the "massacre" directly inspired the creation of volunteer militia forces among the "over-mountain men" (from the Wataugan settlements at and near Sycamore Shoals). These militia participated in actions against British Loyalists at both the Battle of Musgrove Mill on August 18, 1780 (near present-day Clinton, South Carolina) and in the decisive defeat of British Major Patrick Ferguson's command on October 7, 1780 at Kings Mountain (near present-day Blacksburg, South Carolina).
